

2017 - State Disability Insurance (SDI) Schedules

Does Your State Provide SDI?

In the United States, there are several states and one commonwealth that provide statutory disability programs, commonly known as "disability insurance". They are funded by mandatory contributions of employees (optionally covered by employers). Employees' contributions are federal tax-deductible.

Those States are California, Hawaii, New Jersey, New York, and Rhode Island. Puerto Rico is the commonwealth that also provides disability insurance. Below is a brief description of what each of the 5 states and commonwealth must provide in the form of disability coverage.
